Assistant Professor of Comparative Literature Annette Damayanti Lienau is working on a book manuscript on language choice and ideology in the comparative literary histories of Egypt, Indonesia, and Senegal, based on materials in Arabic, French, Malay, and Wolof. She is eager to advise students on language programs, international fellowships, and research projects overseas. Read more...

Commonwealth Honors College is collaborating with the Springfield Museums starting in the spring 2016 semester on the Seuss Project. The project is a set of research, internship, and service opportunities for CHC students. Beginning in the Spring 2016 semester, students can enroll in the course HISTORY 391WH: Social Responsibility in Museums or propose independent study projects. Read more...

Honors alumna Alina Lindblom '11 returned to campus last fall to talk with CHC students about her international experiences studying abroad, as a Fulbright English Teaching Assistant in the Czech Republic, and her current studies in international law. Students interested in the Fulbright Program and other national scholarships should visit the Office of National Scholarship Advisement. Read more...
SCHOLARSHIPS

The deadline for Commonwealth Honors College scholarship applications is on February 29, 2016 at 5:00pm. Commonwealth Honors College scholarships are offered for students in a variety of majors and for students involved in research, service, campus activities and more. In addition, Commonwealth Honors College accepts applications for scholarships offered through the UMass President's Office. We encourage your student to read through the scholarship descriptions to see if they qualify.

SUPPORT HONORS

If you supported Commonwealth Honors College in 2015, thank you! Gifts to the College support individual students and the programs that distinguish honors education on the UMass Amherst campus. Every gift we receive helps to support an economically diverse student body through scholarships and awards, supports student research, and inspires students to think big through our innovative programs.

When we come together as donors, it is amazing what we can accomplish. We hope you will continue to support Commonwealth Honors College in 2016!
