Examining why research must be bolstered by social movements if we are to make a meaningful impact on racial and class inequalities in health.

DEAN E. ROBINSON
Associate Professor
in Political Science,
UMass Amherst
Terrance Murray Commonwealth Honors College Professor

Dean E. Robinson’s research and teaching focuses on the ways in which social status predicts health status and how those patterns reflect politics and policy. He attended Stanford University for his undergraduate degree and Yale University for his PhD in political science.